I. Introduction

The Association of Phonosurgeons of India (APSI), as the senior society representing the subspecialty of laryngology, has developed guidelines for developing and implementing postgraduate training in laryngology. The main focus of these guidelines is to provide a resource for new surgeons and residents considering further training in Laryngology

II. Definition of Subspecialty

Laryngology is a subspecialty within Otolaryngology – Head and Neck Surgery encompassing a field of knowledge that deals with disorders of voice, airway and swallowing. The laryngologist has special expertise in the diagnostic and therapeutic approaches to problems in these areas and participates in the advancement of knowledge through clinical and/or basic science research. Laryngology is a recognized area within otolaryngology training programs and further postgraduate fellowship training is an option for those otolaryngologists wishing to further their education in the field.

III. General Scope of Fellowship Education

Specialized postgraduate training in laryngology should allow exposure to the full range of laryngology, recognizing that each program will have different emphases and focus on certain areas more than others. Areas of emphases should include:

1. Neurolaryngology
2. Professional voice care
3. Neoplastic and non-neoplastic diseases of the larynx
4. Swallowing disorders
5. Disorders of the upper airway

V. Clinical Fellowship Training

The program course of study should be comprehensive and should provide each fellow with opportunities for progressive management of patients in both the clinical and surgical environments.

The academic component will provide supplemental education in the basic sciences related to laryngology including speech and rehabilitative sciences, genetics, (neuro)anatomy, (neuro)physiology, (histo)pathology, pharmacology and wound healing. The latter should include laser-tissue interactions with the various lasers used in laryngology. Fellows are expected to participate in periodic laryngology rounds that discuss comprehensive clinical issues, research issues and morbidity and mortality. The curriculum is designed so that upon completion, the fellow will have sufficient background and experience to establish an independent laryngology program at an academic institution.

Techniques in the diagnosis and management of patients with voice, airway and swallowing disorders should be taught to the laryngology fellow either through direct mentorship by the fellowship faculty or through other resources such as didactic learning or attendance at formal courses. Hands-on experience is expected.

Specific areas of training should include the following:
